A SHORT RECORD OF THE JOHN D. BOYLE FAMILY.

:Purpose of the writer:

To give a short record of the parents of John D. Boyle and of John D. Boyle and of his decendants through his grandchildren and great grandchildren in so far as I know them.

I shall not try to extole the accomplishments, neither shall I be critical of any one.

SCOPE

I shall not try to give dates, only, in so far as it will give a better understanding of the person being spoken of. In so far as I know, I shall try to list something of the childhood of each person, I shall try to tell to what religious denomination each one belonged. In so far as I know, what vocation each one followed. I shall relate such incidents as I think would be of interest. I am skeptical about the amount of interest this will be to the decendants of John D. Boyle, also about the amount of knowledge it may hold for you. But I have been asked to write this; so I shall comply to the best of my ability.

I. Parents of John D. Boyle. They were born and reared in Ireland and came to Kentucky about 1820. They crossed the Atlantic Ocean and landed at New Orleans. From there they took passage by river boat up the Mississippi River to where the Ohio joins that river. Up the Ohio to Louisville, Ky. There they unloaded their possessions and went thirty miles south, to near Bardstown, Ky., and settled on a farm.

They had two sons, William and John D. They were members of the of the Baptist Church, and were buried in a small cemetery at that church. Their home was near the birthplace of Abraham Lincoln.

A. Their children: two sons named above:

William was born in Ireland and came to Kentucky with his parents. He grew up as a farm boy and married there. There is but little history of him. He left Kentucky about 1850 for Iowa. Traveling by wagon. He never was heard of after leaving Kentucky. He was a farmer in Kentucky. He owned slaves. John D. Boyle, the Principal character of this narrative was born in Ireland Sept. 8, 1812 and came to Kentucky as a boy with his parents. If my figures are right, he was eight years old when he came to Kentucky. He grew up on the farm. He had but little schooling, but read extensively, and as a man he was a student of National Affairs. He married Jane Gray. They established a home on a farm. He was opposed to slavery and never owned slaves. He had four children by his first marriage. They were Margaret, Kirtley, John, and Maria. He and his wife were members of the Baptist Church. His wife died young. After his wife's death, he moved to Indiana and bought a farm in Pierson Township, Vigo County, Indiana. He married his second wife in Indiana. She was Eliza Briscoe. They had one child, Nancy Ellen Boyle. He was a man who had sympathy for the fellow who was down and out. His home was open to all who came. Southern Hospitality reigned in his home. He died Jan. 12, 1888. He is buried in the Brown Cemetery, near his home. The children of John D. Boyle and Jane Boyle:

1. Margaret-Born in Kentucky, came to Indiana when her father migrated to Indiana. She did the house work of her father's family until he remarried. They had six children:-William Jackson, Martin V., Samuel R., Charley, Elizabeth, and Mary. When the parents died, the children made their homes with relatives. William Jackson married Letitia Russel. They settled on a farm and spent their days on a farm. They were good industrious people and good neighbors. They are buried in Oak Hill Cemetery. They had eight children:-Audie, Lois, Avis, Rula, Herman, Linus, Eva and Floyd.

Martin V. Heady, at the death of his parents went to live with his grandfather. He was a good industrious boy and man. He was never married. Born June 22, 1862. Died Feb. 19, 1920/

Samuel R. grew up on a farm. He was never married. Born 1865. Died 1940.

Charley married Lou Heady, settled on a farm. They had one daughter, Bertha. Charley died young.

Mary-Mollie married Herman Risley, of Knox county, Indiana and settled on a farm and lived there all of her life. I do not know of their children.

2. Kirtley Boyle-Born in Kentucky and came to Indiana with his father. Born June 15, 1845 and died April 6, 1906. He grew up on a farm and attended school, such as they were. He was a member of the Baptist Church. He married Rachel Bogard Wellman. They settled on a farm and lived there as long as they lived. They had six children:-Two of whom died in infancy. John W., William D., Mary, Mollie, and Odus. They all grew up on the farm and attended the district schools. John W. and William D. attended Indiana State Normal School. They both taught school.
